

OUR STORY

Mathers was constructed by Edward Kuhl and James Delaney over 130 years ago. After miraculously surviving the 1884 fire, which destroyed neighboring businesses, including Orlando's first newspaper, the building became the home to the town's first local post office. In the 1980s, extensive renovations to the building were needed. So, after rising from the ashes, it was appropriately named The Phoenix Building. Other notable tenants include Arnold's Grocery Store and a drug store soda fountain. Today, beneath the original exposed wood truss ceiling, our guests add to our building's rich history.
